Want to learn how to make money in the markets this weekend?

Hi Fellow Traders & Investors --- I learned many years ago that the weekends are an excellent time to do research and learn about the financial markets. When you have a job working 40 to 50 hours per week, study and research is difficult Monday through Friday.

You are probably too stressed and busy during the week to have time to research and study techniques on how to increase your profits trading and investing.

That's why we have weekends. Most successful traders and investors will make time in their busy schedules to research, study and learn how to become successful and then extract profits from the financial markets.

Are you a "Weekend Warrior?" Are you willing to make time available in your busy schedule to learn techniques and strategies that can help you "bring home the bacon?" Perhaps you are already retired but still very busy? Are you willing to make some time available to become a "Weekend Warrior?"

For me, I'm retired from a career as an USAF officer and 20+ years in industry, I never want to stop learning. I never want to stop the profits from flowing into my accounts, for I have 7 grandkids headed to college. I want to help them financially to make their lives easier as they do the hard work of getting the best education possible.

Would you like to join me as a "Weekend Warrior" to carve out some time in your busy schedule to learn more about the financial markets? If so, check out the information below that will help you get started this weekend.

How You Can Take Your Trading

To An Olympic Level -- Saturday Morning

The average trader always has money on the mind. Money, money, money. A couple more points. A sexy balance sheet.

That's also why they're average. The best of the best aren't thinking about money at all. Let's use an analogy to prove this point.

What happens to an Olympian who's always looking up at the scoreboard or clock? They lose the puck, fall behind another skier, or miss their landing. What happens to the Olympian who is focused on improving their game, making the right pass, hitting the right turn, and nailing their landing? They win.

This is no different than trading. Money is the byproduct. We all know that. But focusing on the byproduct doesn't get you any closer to it. To take your trading to an Olympian level, you must remove yourself from the bottom line and focus on what makes you better. If you can't do that, go liquidate your brokerage account. You shouldn't be trading.

This Saturday, you can take that first step towards the gold. At 10:00am EST, the Olympic Trading Summit will bring you a full day of free trading education via live webcast.

You'll have the opportunity to focus on improving your strategies and learning new ones. The educators will be some of the brightest and most experience traders in their respective areas. Options, Equities, and ETFs will be the focus and everything from swing trading to options spreads will be covered.

The good guys over at Marketfy are putting the event on and they're providing invites to all our readers. The event, which is being sponsored by MBTrading and Benzigna Pro, will have a bunch of freebies, promotions, and offers for those in attendance.

Joe's Tip: Enter the room by 9:45am EST if you want to get in. The room caps at 1300 attendees and it only took 45 minutes to get there the last time they did this.

Register today to gain FREE access to the Olympic Trading Summit by clicking on access details as shown below.

Trader_Joe's Market Perspectives

Some of my subscribers requested that I share some of my perspectives on the stock markets on a periodic basis. Here is what I shared about TSLA and GS on 2/11/2014:

Hi fellow traders and investors. For those of you who follow Investors Business Daily (IBD), the market is once again in rally mode. Today's market was up by 1% on volume that was higher than yesterday's volume. Therefore it was named as a "Follow Through" day according to IBD's definition. Did you know that the market closed higher each of the last four days? Each day the close was near the high for that day. For now, it appears that we are now in a nice uptrend, which we hope will continue.

We should still be cautious about entering new positions because a confirmed uptrend does not give us a high probability that the market will continue higher at this time. Although we would like to have an 80% to 90% probability that the market will continue to move higher, the probability of a continued move up is closer to only 60% even after the market has entered into a confirmed uptrend.

A couple of stocks that I find interesting on the long side at this time is GS and TSLA. I favor the use of calls for both for directional trades so that we get more "bang-for-the-buck" instead of outright purchase of the individual stocks. Goldman Sachs Group has been building a base for several days now and seems to have found support around $160 after a pullback from a high of $181.13. Using fib values of 50% and 61.80%, GS could continue up to $170.50 to $173 before much resistance.

Tesla Motors broke out to a new high today at $202.20. This could continue up to fib 127.2% which would be around $220 before it some resistance. However, you need to be cautious since earnings will be announced on February 19th after market close. Many of us prefer not to hold a position through earnings unless we currently have at least a 10% profit in the position. You will need to decide if you want to hold or close your position on or before Feb. 19th.

Updated Note: Nothing exciting on GS which did base at 159.77 and has moved up slightly to 164.50 close on 2.20.2014. However, TSLA has been very exciting on the long side by gapping up and then closing up $16.33 (8.43%) on 2.20.2014 because of very favorable earnings yesterday after market close on estimated earnings of $0.045 versus actual earnings of $0.33. Hope you were able to get your toe in the water on this one....could be going higher.

Have a wonderful weekend. Want to learn how NOT to prepare for your next kick-boxing event. Although somewhat humorous, I felt sorry for this athletic in the Philippines who did not have a pair of shoes to wear while practicing on a hot day near Manila.....see what I mean.
